Capri wears white

Here we are in Capri, the Pearl of the Gulf of Naples, a destination for tourists from all over the world renowned for its uniquely suggestive beauty. In the Year 2000, a boutique known as 100% Capri by Tony Aiello, the famous Italian stylist, first opened its doors. Friulparchet has been a 100% Capri partner for years, and has signed its own "designer name" to the wood floors in its various atelier while providing a different finish to the floors of each one in the color white that evokes this particular line of couture as the same common denominator in all. A BioLinea parquet in Castello format - this year's novelty product for the parquet producer based in Friuli - was chosen for this recently renovated Capri store. Castello is a three-layer planking in solid European Oak from Slavonia given a "Snowy white" stain and a gleaming oil finish. The plank's big sizes and the color take the boutique's exclusive and minimalist decor to even higher levels of elegance. Snowy white is a distinctive feature in both the island's architecture and the bottega's warm shading. The oil used for the finish is a high-resistance oil formulated for public areas with extensive walkable surfaces. Castello is the brand new Friulparchet format designed for spacious and prestigious locations. The planks that range from 200 to 400 mm in width and run up to 3000 mm in length are composed of three layers of European Oak from Slavonia. Many colors and finishes can be given to this product, and even exclusively personalized solutions can be adopted in the oiling, painting, planing, and engraving performed. All this, with workmanship performed entirely in Italy.
